“You’re going to be a famous writer one day, baby. Watch what I tell ya.” Big Momma’s ancient words lingered in her head; ached down in her bones. Plagued by her parents' murder suicide, haunted by dreams, Police Officer Ginger Ann Montgomery has plenty to write about. The rough draft to her first manuscript complete, Ginger can taste the New York Times Best Seller’s List. Envious of her partner’s announcement to wed his dingbat girlfriend of six months, Ginger heads to a call – a simple 9-1-1 hang up, silently questioning her lengthy relationship with Detective Caleb Arrington. Worthy enough to co-own their pricey estate, beautiful enough to flaunt like a trophy, yet unfit to wear the Arrington name. But this routine call answered a gazillion times is anything but simple. The 9-1-1 hang up turns out to be the deadliest call in the history of the police department. Four cops shot; three laid dead. Now the Police Department and FBI shared a common goal, backed by American’s Most Wanted: Capture the serial killer name Felicia Payne. Riddled with guilt as the one lone survivor, Ginger finds herself in the arms of another. One willing to fulfill the cravings Caleb ignored. One who takes her hand and lures her down a path where she unites with a fate similar to her mother’s.
